Speaker

Alan Koch owns and operates Gold Country Orchids where he specializes in miniature and compact Cattleya's. Alan started growing orchids in 1969 with 3 Cymbidiums given to him by an aunt. While in college, he became interested in other orchids and discovered many would grow outdoors in Southern California. He has moved five times as his orchid obsession has led to the need for more growing space. With the last move, he purchased 10 acres of land in Lincoln, California for his 300,000 orchids. He is recognized as an expert in the Brazilian Cattleya alliance and a trend setter in miniature Cattleya breeding. Alan has been published in the Orchid Digest, and the American Orchid Society magazines. He has also been published in the proceedings of the World Orchid Conference. He is an internationally known speaker. He is a past member of the AOS Judging Committee, and the Research Committee, as well as an Accredited Judge and is Vice-chair and Training Coordinator for the California Sierra Nevada Judging Center. Alan also served two terms on the Orchid Digest Executive Committee and Board of Directors, and is one of the current directors, as well as a Trustee for the AOS.

ORCHIDS WE SHOULD ALL GROW

CATTLEYTONIA WHY NOT

For those of you who love bright colors and Cattleyas, but don't have vast spaces to grow large specimen Catts, here's an idea; Why Not?

Cattleytonia (Ctna) Ctna. Why Not could be the answer to your quest. Ctna. Why Not is a cross made by Stewart Orchids and registered in 1979. A cross of Broughtonia sanguinea and Cattleya aurantiaca, Why Not is a small 8-12" n height, but robust plant and a prolific bloomer. Flowers are 1 1/2" across and borne in small clusters, similar to aurantiaca.

Like most Cattleytonia hybrids, Broughtonia sanguinea is the dominant parent, projecting both size and coloration to its hybrids. Why Not typically is a bright red or red-orange with a yellow throat and a predominantly yellow lip.

During the 1980's, at the height of Cattleytonia popularity, Why Not was a very popular parent with over 150 registered crosses. In fact, it was crossed with almost anything that would hold a seed pod. Some were very good crosses, some, not so good. Most however, carried the bright red-orange color and small size to the next generation.

Ctna Why Not is an easy plant to grow if you remember its family history. Broughtonias are island plants many from Cuba and Jamaica. Hence, warm temperatures, high moisture and relatively low elevations (translate- usually warm evenings and not too cold tolerant in winter).

Why Not grows well in a fairly coarse (for its size) well drained mixture. It adapts well to pot or basket culture and does well mounted on a wood slab. It should be fed regularly with a half strength low phosphorus fertilizer. Grow it in relatively high light, brighter than most other Cattleyas, and let it dry hard between watering.

A mature well grown plant will flower several times a year with the primary and heaviest blooming cycle in spring.

If repotting or splitting the plant, remember that one parent is a bifoliate Cattleya and should only be disturbed when very short new root tips are emerging. If you wait too long, you risk breaking off the tender roots and either losing a years growth or possibly, the whole plant.

Finally, a word to those purists who insist on proper nomenclature. Like many Cattleya hybrids, Why Not has been renamed. Since C. auriantica is now Guaritanthe aurantiaca, Ctna Why Not has been reclassified Guaritonnia Why Not.

While the name may change, the brilliant red-orange remain

Hi SOS members,

I'm Kathy Naylor. My parents, E.C. 'Ted' and Gwen Naylor, raised thousands of orchids as a hobby. When they needed a greenhouse sitter or someone to wrap wires for a SOS show and as they got older and needed help, they called me and my sister. I learned how much work your orchids demand.

My job is finding part time jobs for persons with disabilities. Some of them love gardening and could help you care for your orchids. Individuals need to work at least 4-5 hours one morning a week, but they can work up to 20 hours a week if they receive SSI (usually $750/mo.). Pay is at least minimum wage ($8.05/hr), a bargain considering the living wage in Sarasota is $15/hr. They can help you with those chores that need to be done, but you never seem to have time to do them yourself. Helping you would provide purposeful work for them and you could enjoy good company while you work with them. You do not have to provide care for them. They have a variety of disabilities including Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI), Autism, Mental Retardation and other physical disabilities. I will not place someone in a job the person cannot do. If an individual with TBI requires assistance, someone comes with them to provide that care. Please consider hiring someone to help you in the greenhouse. I was an Alzheimer's nurse. I changed careers due to physical disability. Persons with disabilities find different ways to do the same things you do. <https://www.facebook.com/boleycenters/>
